ABOUT THE NATIONAL CREDIT UNION FOUNDATION

The National Credit Union Foundation is a non-profit, charitable foundation chartered in 1980 and is widely recognized as the national charitable arm of the U.S. credit union movement. Having both the knowledge and resources necessary to undertake national programming, the Foundation serves as the financial intermediary between credit unions and governmental agencies, and funds innovative initiatives in support of consumer financial education, savings and asset accumulation. To learn more about NCUF, visit www.ncuf.coop.

ABOUT THE J.F. FRIEDRICK HOTEL AND CONFERENCE CENTER

The J.F. Friedrich Hotel and Conference Center was constructed in 1958 by the University of Wisconsin-Madison as one of the Elm Drive or Lakeshore Drive dormitories. The building was converted into a continuing education center in 1976 and was then assigned to the University of Wisconsin-Extension. Their mission is to provide a clean, comfortable, and convenient retreat setting for continuing education and professional development conferences and meetings. To learn more about Madison's J.F. Friedrich Center, visit <http://conferencing.uwex.edu/friedrick.cfm>.

ABOUT ISLANDWOOD

Located on 255-acres on south Bainbridge Island, Washington, IslandWood is one of the nation's most innovative educational facilities, offering programs for everyone - children, graduate students, teachers, families, and adults. It was designed to provide exceptional learning experiences and inspire lifelong environmental and community stewardship. Drop a pebble in the water.
In a minute you forget.
But there's little waves a-flowing,
and there's ripples circling yet.

Go ahead.
Make a ripple.
Become a
Credit Union
Development Educator.

A program of the National Credit Union Foundation

Make the Development Education Program a part of your credit union's essential training program.

The Development Education (DE) Program is an intensive, six-day training program on credit union uniqueness and social responsibility. Linking our past with the present, the program strives to bring renewed relevance to the phrase, People Helping People.

Many credit union professionals have never heard of Development Education training. Although it's been around for 25 years, it's the industry's best kept secret. That's because one of the credit union system's most highly rated educational programs, the 6-day DE Program, is run like a retreat without a convention hall and expensive meals. Those who've been through the program rate it among the best educational programs they've ever attended.

"DE is the only program I am aware of that focuses on making the business case of why cooperative financial services make sense in the larger financial services marketplace. The old adage that Philosophy is Good Business is demonstrated time and again in this intensive training."

Dick Ensweiler, CEO
Texas Credit Union League
Graduate, CUDE Class of 1989

Every year, people from all parts of the credit union movement become certified as Credit Union Development Educators (CUEs). Join the ranks of your peers as they commit volunteer and professional time to deliver the credit union message to audiences throughout the world.

Join the ranks of the credit union movement's visionaries. Attend an upcoming DE Training.

Who should attend? Anyone who is passionate about credit unions, anyone who believes that credit unions have the ability to impact the world around them.

Participant diversity is one of the program's great strengths. People from different parts of the movement from all over the world have attended the DE 6-day program. They learn from each other and draw on the wealth of experience pooled in this interactive dynamic program. Past trainees include credit union CEOs, volunteers, and staff; state credit union league and foundation staff; CUNA, CUNA Mutual and WOCCU staff; and even a few NCUA staff. The graduate roster is a list of the best and brightest from the credit union movement. Participants have come from as far as Australia, Fiji, Philippines, the UK, Mexico, Canada, the Caribbean and Korea.

Through discussions of cultures and movements in developing nations, credit union roots are brought to vivid life; new light is shed on the inherent power of our cooperative structure; and practical lessons are learned on relying on others to solve problems.

The innovative, interactive program covers credit union social responsibility, international issues, domestic finance issues, Community Development Credit Unions, volunteerism, history, philosophy and more contemporary issues, all under the umbrella of 'development.'

Register today. Don't miss out on the most insightful training in the industry.

"I would encourage all credit union professionals and even volunteers – to dust away the mental cobwebs and treat yourself to a week of DE training. With the future of credit unions so uncertain in this country, this training will ground you and sustain you through the turbulent times ahead for our movement – regardless of how long you've been in it."

Mary Cunningham, CEO
USA FCU
Graduate, CUDE Class of April 1997
